

Fund Manager's Strategy & Outlook

The last month of the year was characterized by heightened volatility across regional bourses on the back of the continued sharp selloff in crude prices. Brent crude slipped 27.8% during the month to close below the USD 60 level and is currently trading at USD 50 per barrel. The largest hits were taken by the UAE bourses as Dubai lost 14.9% and the Abu Dhabi bourse was down 8.5%. The Qatari and Kuwaiti markets dropped 8.2% and 6.0%, respectively, followed by the Saudi bourse which was down 5.8%. Regionally Egypt was an outperformer having lost 2.2% and Turkey stood out with a 1.0% gain over the month.

The market was eagerly anticipating the Saudi budget and its informal release earlier in the month helped push the Saudi index upwards. The total amount outlined for spending is at a record level of SAR 860bn up from SAR 855bn the previous year, and given commitments, including those to upgrade infrastructure, higher than budgeted spending can likely reoccur. Based on projected revenues of SAR 715bn, the Saudis have implied a budgeted oil price of just over USD 60bbl and the largest appropriation of SAR 217 has been made towards the education sector. The estimated budget deficit is easily financed through (i) reserves of approximately USD 750bn and (ii) the very low level of public debt which stands at just 1.6% of GDP. Saudi Arabia should be able to continue its spending with ease and follow its policy on diversifying its economy while creating further employment for citizens. The opening of the market is also another catalyst which should play a key role in 2015, and concerns on the health of the monarch may cause interim volatility. Dubai also announced its expansionary balanced budget with spending planned at pre-2009 crisis which indicates that the government is confident in meeting its preparations plans for the Expo2020. Total expenditure planned is up 8.7% Y-o-Y on the back of projected revenue growth of 11.3% Y-o-Y. The major economies of the region have displayed their commitment to support economic growth and a recovery in crude prices will enhance their ability to do so. The IPO market also remains active currently with Massar solutions launching its USD 157mn offering.

The Fund has continued on its trajectory of outperformance over the course of last year through stock selection which will become an even major component in 2015. Over the previous months the Fund has been repositioned into a more defensive and lower risk portfolio with a greater concentration in key themes and fundamentally attractive names. Exposure to the Saudi market has been reshuffled from the petrochemical names into the consumer, insurance and real estate sectors. Country allocations have also been changed in line with the strategy and the overall beta of the Fund has declined. The next determinate of market movement are the upcoming FY 2014 results.
