Fund's Performance

The market started the year with a good rally on the back of positive developments on the political front as the constitutional referendum passed, and investors now are looking forward to the presidential elections. However, the market saw a correction towards the end of the quarter after a continuous upward run that lasted for a number of months and with many of the expectations that led the market rally materializing. The fund returns for 1Q2014 reached 13.3% while the EGX30 showed a performance of 21.1% for the same period.

On the economic front, the Minister of Planning announced that Egypt's economy grew by 1.2% in 1H2013/2014, as the stimulus plans are being implemented. Moreover, the government is expecting new Gulf aid worth USD5.8 billion in the form of central bank deposits and petroleum products, as well as, the first installment of a EUR 5 billion support package from the European Union (EU) worth EUR 500 million. Furthermore, the government announced the final details for the second stimulus package, with spending mainly split between development projects and financing social programs, including a rise in the minimum wage. Investment Strategy

The fund manager will trim the exposure by locking in profits in high beta names that are deep in the money. Meanwhile, the fund manager will maintain the well diversified stock portfolio with more focus on consumer stocks that are set to benefit from the stimulus packages.
